

Congratulations!

Congratulations to Colin Holder, Jamie Morley and Nick Sandell who all achieved the Construction Skills Site Management Safety Training Certificate.

The Construction Skills Health & Safety scheme sets the standard for the industry and ensures that everyone working in construction with the certificate has a good level of health and safety awareness.

Our three Site Managers are currently working on projects throughout Norfolk; Colin Holder is creating a new Floral Tribute area at Mintlyn Crematorium for Kings Lynn Borough Council. Jamie Morley is supervising the development of six new bungalows in Swaffham and Nick Sandell is nearing completion of a barn conversion in Stow Bedon.

Clayland have made a commitment to develop the skills and knowledge of their existing staff and new employees. We strongly believe that investing time and energy into training is one of the best things we can do for the company long term. We have developed a number staff through Apprenticeship programs delivered by the College of West Anglia. We also offer ongoing training to existing staff who want further their skills and progress through the company.

This strategy has ensured that our staff have acquired the necessary skills that suit their individual roles within the business and in turn has allowed the business to build expertise for the future.

Clayland has expanded in response to new and far reaching government legislation on planning design and environmental issues the company now includes Architectural Design with planning advice and assistance and Quantity Surveying. We also offer residential Air Leakage Testing, SAP calculations, Code for Sustainable Homes advice and Certification through our sister company Anglia Air Testing.

With these new divisions Clayland can handle almost every aspect of a project in house, our tradesmen and designers strive to ensure that Clayland's unique stamp of quality is apparent in every Clayland home.
